land. He savs :-"In the abstract it would be best to side with no one, and to observe a strict neutrality. But has Italy nothing to gain? Is there nothing by which she can profit? If the gain or the profit could be made by remaining neutral—that is to say, by putting a price on her neutrality-it would be the summum opus. A neutral Italy: would be understandable if she had no tendencies. nothing to desire. Satisfied in herself, she could follow a purely pacific line of conduct, thinking of nothing but the increase and the consolidation of her internal forces. There would then be no need for keeping up a great army and spending money on colossal war preparations while her furncial condition is so serious. But yonder there is Tunis, here there is the Trentine, and on the other side there is the East. Moreover. there is Italy's just pretension to being a great Power, to my nothing of the unreasonable-pretensions of those who would have ber so at all cost and at every moment. To these the just pretensions serve as a corrective. A policy of absolute nontrality is, therefore not understandable, except as one of complete concentration. Perhaps this would be excellent, but without doubt it is not what Italy has followed hitherto or is likely to follow in the future. . . . Supposing, then, that the result should be favourable to Austria and Germany in a war with France and Russia, and, let us say, also England. If Italy maintained an armed neutrality, but on conditions agreed upon with France and Russia, what would she gain in case of those Powers suffering a reverse P Neither frontier nor anything to coun- Wet Thermometer. 78.0 78.0 78.0 78.0 78.0 78.0 78.0 63.0 terpoise against the expansion of Austria, nor any security at Tunis. But supposing, on the other hand, France and Russia remained the victors-a result which is looked upon here in Vienna as highly improbable - France victorious would accomplish the sorritude of Italy politicully and economically. Of Tunis it would be useless to think further, and the Italian monarchy would have sufficient with which to ceenpy itself at home. France having regained the pereminence in Europe and with the aureole of a splendid raumche, would dieute laws to Italy. even at Rome. . . In the case of Italy entering into an alliance offensive and defensive with France and Russia, and the victory resting with Germany and Austria, the consequences would he most disutrons to her; while should France and Russia be the victors her gain would be problematical, and she would have at once to pass under the domination of France. Returning, then, to the true interests of Italy, and especially to the greater difficulties-the affairs of the East and the expansion of Austria. If, say the Germans, Italy is not certain of the power of preventing this, it would be better she should co-operate. Austria would go to Salonica, and could not Italy go where she knows she has the English hands. It is more than sufficiently evident that the st reduced rates. long letter from which I send you the above salient paragraphs has been written with the object of premoting that Italian alliance with Germany and Austria, which is now whispered about ; but that is not its chief point of interest. The speculations the letter sets forth are those of a dreamer, but it is an exact reflex of the kind of talk one hears everywhere. It is becoming almost an article of faith that Unless she entered into an alliance with France, the French and Russian fleets combined would, to say the least. threaten her long extended seaboard, including that of Sicily and of Sardinia. They would probably send her an ultimatum, "With us or against us?" and, not receiving a satisfactory maswer, employ their united sea forces in disposing of her little fleet-the strongth of her four big ships notwithstanding -in blockading her ports, and, compelling her to keep her army at home, neutralize her power of helping Austria and Germany. She must, therefore, take sides and enter into action, and in her doubly exposed position towards Austria on the one side and towards the sea on the other she would whatever might be the result, suffer from the effects of such a war in a proportion for outweighing any advantage she might gain, whe- SPECIAL RESERVE FUND ... But Italy is a young and ardent nation, yearning to emulate the glories of her past, and these possibilities, or rather certainties, are scarcely weighed. That England, should she take part in such a conflict together with France and Russia, would spare Italy is also a dreamer's facey. England's interest would be to localize the struggle, and bring the conflict to a termination as rapidly as possible. Italy is not her only or best market. nor are Italian Consols the only European securities she holds. Thompson, Master, will lead here for the above An Auglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given. the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of hody, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a dearness not previously attained and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration :-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 15,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000. English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appliestions and equivalents of different words which lieve one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than live times as many at any other Dictionary hitherto pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English | FINTING or EVERY DESCRIPTIO to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages. .. A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of SIX or more Copies.

EXTRACTS.

THE END OF THE SEASON. Dear Atlas, though our path is set With philosophic boulders, Your constant readers' don't forget The world is on your shoulders-This great gay world whose throbbing life Is fed with crumbs of soundal; Which calls the man who loves his wife An undefeated Vandal;

Which loves with gold to line the nest . Where doven are sold so dearly ; Which is so late in taking rest, And hates awaking early. This world, by Fashion's storn beheat So tightly hold together, Is now dissolved, and goes in quest Of case and rolden weather.

Is that bare track the Ladies' Mile, Where honnies rode and firted, And Guardsmen wrangled for a smile! Ah mo, it's now deserted! Is that the seat which heard my vows Beneuth the plane-trees shady ! Tis empty now; and Jack's at Cowes Proposing to my lady

I'll six me down and think it out-To doubt her would be treason; She's seventeen (or thereabout). And this was her first season. We met at Lady Courtly's ball, Amidat a growd of dancers : We found a rose-bower in the hall, And shirked the formal Lancora.

.We valued : her frame, so lithe and shim, Dispulled each doubting notion, As in my arms she beemed to swim; The 'postry of motion.' O chastnut hair! O velvet eges! Which speak such wealth of passion; a -I fear you are not worldly wise, Although you set the fashion.)

Philosophy has got a charm . (I thought of Martin Tupper). And offering mamma my arm, I took her down to suppor; I gave her Pommery (carts d'or), Which seethed in rosy bubbles; called this floating life a bore, The world a sea of troubles.

I called myself an aimless boat Bereft of sails or radder, Whom only money kept affort; Hereat she gave a shadder, But eyed me keenly none the less, And, when I laughed at marriage, She said, 'Door Gladys, mind your dress, Sir Guy, please call the carriage."

Ltucked my dainty sweetheart in, And kissed a scented blossom, Which, freed from thraldom of a pin. Fell fluttoring from her bosom. And thus it was that first we mot (The world may call me silly); Pour moi! I lit a cigarette. And strolled down Piccadilly. And thus it also came to pass

That while I paid my duty, My little titled lady was Acknowledged as a boauty ! Quite unprofessional ! Her birth Of course proclaimed her station No need had she to scour the earth To 'get an invitation.'

No need to pose, or break her heart, Or ape a protty shyness; Or conjure up a modest part To charm his Royal Highmess. She was not of the heartless throng Midst whom love lies a-blooding; Whose creed is, Beauty does no wrong; A fice for good breeding !"

She drove, to Sandown, Ascot, Lord's, She went to balls and 'crashes; Mine was the hand that pulled the cords Which caused her loveliest blushes, She played in tableaux—for a freak (!)— And made a deep sensation; And all the great methetic clique Accorded approbation.

The learn disciples of Burne-Jones Hummed airs from Traviata; And called her in delirious tones 'An exquisite sonata.' At Kensington her winsome face Defeated hearts unwilling; She took five pounds when Lady Grace Had scarcely turned a shilling.

And all this time behind my back, When I had gone off duty, That graceless Guardsman, 'handsome Jack,' Made fleres love to my beauty! Mamma, where's Guy?' He'd ourl his lip, And smile in faint decision ; While I blasphemed the 'four line whip'

About that blanked division.

He burned his toothpick, broke his crutch, Renounced ploquet and poker, Threw up the rôle (which pained us much) Of regimental joker. Ho sont her bouquets for the play, , And diamond sprays from Streeter's, And held her Prayer-book all the way

From Lowndes-street to St. Peter's. But stories reached mamma's sharp sare Of certain legal actions, Which roalised her unformed fears

Of cards and 'torf transactions.' At Goodwood, when he made his bow, Her glance was somewhat chilly, On hearing that he'd 'dropped ave thou.' Upon the chestnut filly.

And I-well, I've not seen her since The Hollands' garden party, When she was walking with the Prince, And kinsed her hand to 'Harty.' And Jack's at Cowes on board his back, And she's with Lady Glonny; And I am soated in the Park,

And searching for a penny. But still I think that I can tell. From this pink fragrant letter, That, though she loves Jack pretty well, She loves mo somewhat better. . .

Well, Jem, what nows? This wretched House Will sit into September! To-morrow ushers in St. Grouse, As doubtless you remember.

We've got to dine and catch the train Hang Irish retrogression i We've "paired," and Whips may plead in vain About a wasted Session). The 'guns' are fresh, the dogs are keen, O'er fragrant heath to sesmper; And Atlas will expect, I ween,

A most gigantic hamper ! B. W. H. -World.
